Gwinnett Tech Expands Continuing Education Class Locations

GTC Will Utilize Gwinnett Place Mall for Classroom Space to Bring High-Demand Courses into Community

(LAWRENCEVILLE) – Gwinnett Technical College will soon offer Continuing Education Division courses in new classroom space at Gwinnett Place Mall, expanding high-demand language and business services training courses from the college's main campus into the community.

Gwinnett Tech's Continuing Education Division will occupy 32,600 square feet at Simon Property Group's Gwinnett Place Mall, opening in mid-September with classes starting in early October 2008.

"With continued and significant growth at our main campus, we've been looking for ways to best increase capacity and serve more people," says Sharon Bartels, president, Gwinnett Tech. "Taking these Continuing Education courses into the community where residents can benefit supports our mission on two fronts – improving access to education for all who desire it and supporting economic development in the communities we serve."

Courses to be taught at the new Gwinnett Tech location at Gwinnett Place will focus on workforce training to meet the needs of individuals and companies in the area. These classes will include:

- English as a Second Language (ESL)
- Serve Safe
- OSHA Safety Training (English and Spanish)
- General Industry and Construction courses
- Real Estate
- Starting & Owning Your Own Business
- Supervisory Skills
- Master Electrician Training
